A great many people seem not to understand that Osteopathy treats all diseases that any school of medicine treats, but that Osteopaths only "rub" selected diseases and injuries.

There is no such thing as rubbing in the Osteopathic profession. A glance at the above comparison of subjects taught in the Osteopathic and the drug schools, should convince one that Osteopaths have more knowledge of the medical profession than how to "rub."

Osteopathy is a complete and independent system of treating diseases by scientific manipulations, the purpose and intent of each manipulation being either to correct some derangement in the position of the tissues, to increase or decrease the activity of some organ. It is not a remedy or method applicable to some particular disease or group of symptoms, but is co-extensive with the art and science of healing, and successfully treats all curable, acute and chronic diseases. Its field includes all those diseases treated by any school of medicine.

What is Hays going to do in regard to the proposed railroads that are headed in this direction? The Free Press has not heard any mention of them for several weeks. Hays people cannot afford to lay down on any proposition that will be a benefit and a boost for the town.

Last Sunday the members of the Lutheran Sunday School, presented their pastor, Rev. Wiest, with a purse of money and the congregation also increased his salary $500 per year. Fortunately is the man who, while yet on earth, can hear the welcome plauds, "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

Stab and Mr. Jake Walder of Buckeye Township, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pfeiffer of Pleasant Hill Township. It was a pleasant gathering which was enjoyed by all present.

On the first page of the Free Press will be found the Mayor's proclamation; a call for an election to occur on November 29th, to decide whether Hays shall have commission form of government or continue the old and uncertain way of city government by wards as in the past. Other and smaller cities than Hays have tried the commission form and have found the new way much the best. A large number of Hays citizens seem to want it, then why not give it a trial and if it is a success here and it has proven in other towns; then it is the kind of government Hays people are looking for. Let us give it a trial.

Monday, October 23, will occur the first number of the Normal Lyceum Course for the present year. The Normal faculty are at a great expense, each year, to bring something good for the entertainment of the people; something that will instruct as well as entertain. This year the program of the Lyceum is better than ever before and should be liberally patronized. Some persons seem to think that the Normal people make money by bringing these entertainments, but such is not the fact. If they break even, they are in luck. We know from personal knowledge, that a number of times last year, they had to go down into their pockets and pay a deficit from $75 to $150, therefore, as these entertainments are mostly in the interest of the students and the people of Hays, they should be and are being loyally supported. Don't forget "The Zensler Symphonic Sextette" at the Normal Auditorium, October 22nd.

The Light Plant Again.

About two years ago, the citizens of Hays were called upon to vote for municipal ownership of the Hays Electric Light and Power plant. The Free Press then as now, was heartily in favor of the city owning and running the plant for the benefit of the citizens of the city, but after rather a hotly contested campaign, the proposition was turned down at the polls. Now the matter has come to the front again. The owners of the Light Plant have recently asked (as their franchise will soon expire) that the city council grant them a new franchise. The city council, after deliberating with the owners of the plant, have employed a Kansas City Engineering Company to appraise the plant to ascertain approximately what it is worth, and will again submit the question of municipal ownership of the plant, to the citizens of the city, Nov. 20th, the same date called for the decision on commission form of government.

It has simply narrowed down to two propositions. The city must either own the plant or the Light Company will be given a new franchise, and that will probably mean the sale of the plant to some outside firm that will work the business for all it is worth. Municipal ownership will mean a reduction in the cost of lights for the city and its citizens. A new franchise will mean the same rate of 15c. per kilowatt. If the property should be sold to outside parties, a higher rate might be charged. See Mayor Chittenden or the Light Plant people, and get all information possible before you decide.

This important matter will be discussed in future issues of the Free Press, and we hope that the property holders and voters will take a different view of the matter at the next election.

OBITUARY

Cordelia Frances Fitch, widow of Marcus J. B. Treat, passed out of the body to a higher life August 17, 1916, while sitting peacefully in her wheel chair under the beautiful trees in the yard of her home, upon the anniversary of her marriage to the husband of her youth, Chester J. Colborn.

Mrs. Treat was married to Mr. Treat, June 16, 1861, at Medina, Ohio, and moved from Medina, Ohio, to Memphis, Tenn., during the first year of the Civil War. During this struggle Mrs. Treat was a friend to the Union soldiers, and the orphans of the colored race. For this race she sacrificed several years of her early life, by taking charge of the Memphis Colored Orphan Asylum, which was founded by Mr. Treat's sister, Mrs. S. A. Martha Canfield, who was a very noble character. This asylum was turned over to the Episcopal Diocese at the close of the war.

Mr. Treat came to Hays, October 22, 1887, leaving his wife in her position at the asylum, until he could make a home for her. She arrived in Hays, with her two children May, 1898.

They had many struggles in this western town, and she stood shoulder to shoulder with her husband in laying the foundation of their future home and fortune.

One of the incidents of her life in the early days centered around a very desperate character, whose name was James Currie, who terrorized the town, no man dared to ask for help from the Fort, finally two women, one of them Mrs. Treat, slipped out and going in, a round about way reached the Fort and secured troops for relief, and such was the terror of Currie and his crowd, that Mrs. Treat and her friend did not dare tell of their midnight journey for years.

In the early days when anyone was needed in time of birth, sickness, and death, Mrs. Treat was the comforter and helper.

Mrs. Treat was a charter member of the Eastern Star and the Rebekah Lodge.

May God bless her for her work here, may His light shine upon her in her new home, where she is not in the darkened mental condition and crippled state that was her lot in the last few years of her life.
